Leagues' Competitions Overview

SEASON 2022/23

FOREWORD

The European Leagues and its members are pleased to share their 2022/23 Competitions Overview. A unique report of its kind, it is published annually by our Association at the start of the football season. It presents a complete overview of the sporting results of the previous season and of all key competition elements of domestic leagues across Europe for the upcoming season, on a country-by-country basis. For each domestic league competition this publication showcases its competition format, the relevant information on the season match-calendar as well as all the individual match-day kick-off times in each country. The exact dates of the players' transfer windows in both summer 2022 and winter 2023 were also made available by our members.

This football season will be definitely marked and remembered for the extraordinary calendar break in domestic competitions, from 14 November 2022 until 18 December 2022, so to create space for the first ever FIFA World Cup to be played during European autumn/winter weeks. There's curiosity but also some question marks for the way leagues, clubs, players, coaches, and football fans will experience and react to this unusual and prolonged international window in the middle of their national championships. The leagues' winter breaks, if any, will be shorter and different while the football calendar will be seriously tested due the high congestion of match fixtures during the whole season. At the same time, the winter transfer window after the World Cup could be also impacted by the performance of players during the international tournament in the Middle East.

Notwithstanding that, with just 13 European national teams playing at the FIFA tournament in Qatar, professional league football won't simply stop in our continent. Most domestic competitions will be playing mainly with their second and lower divisions with some remarkable exceptions in Romania, Slovakia and Northern Ireland where premier division will run their regular calendar, and in Portugal where the League Cup will be played during the World Cup.

After three football seasons heavily impacted by the Covid pandemic and its restrictions, it is now time for football fans to be back to the stadiums with full energies to cheer for their favorite clubs.

We wish to the whole community of football a fantastic league season!
